ARBITit happens here...

#THE MEME ECONOMY

Turning Online Humour into Real Income

How digital creators are monetizing internet humour through content strategy, brand partnerships, and social media virality.

the digital era. numour has become more than just a form of entertain ment, it has evolved into a viable career path. Memes, once confined to casual internet culture, are now central to a growing industry where online humour translates into real income. The rise of social media platforms like Instagram, YouTube, and X (formerly Twitter) has paved the way for meme creators to generate revenue through a mix of content creation, influ encer marketing, and brand collaborations.

At the core of this shift is the increasing value that brands place on relatability and engagement. Unlike traditional advertising, memes offer bite-sized content that's instantly shareable and emo tionally resonant. Their ability to convey messages quickly and humourously makes them an effective marketing tool, especially among younger audiences. This demand has led to the emergence of a new kind of digital professional: the meme strategist.

Meme creators often begin by building niche pages or personal brands around specific themes, pop culture, social commentary, workplace humour, or everyday struggles. Once a significant follower base is established, monetization opportunities follow. Common income sources include sponsored posts, affiliate marketing, paid partnerships, platform-based monetization (such as Instagram Reels bonuses or YouTube ad revenue), and merchandise sales. Many creators operate anonymously, running meme pages that cater to highly specific demographics. These micro-communities offer valuable targeting for advertisers. who seek out these creators for their influence within certain segments. Meme pages that maintain consistent engagement often attract attention from startups, tech firms, lifestyle brands, and even traditional companies looking to modernize their digital presence. The mechanics of success in this field are rooted in timing, creativity, and data. Viral content depends on cultural relevance and algorithmic reach. Meme creators track performance metrics like engagement rate, shares, reach, and audience retention to refine their content strategy The goal is to balance humour with visibility while maintain ing an authentic voice.

Brands have also adapted by incorporating meme culture into their marketing strategies. Several companies now employ social media teams dedicated to trendspotting and meme creation. These teams develop campaigns that mimic the organic humour of internet culture while subtly promoting products or servic-

However, the profession is not without its challenges. The need for constant creativity and quick responsiveness to trends can lead to content fatigue and burnout. Meme creators must also navigate evolving platform policies. copyright considerations, and audience expectations.

Despite these challenges, the meme economy continues to grow. Influencer marketing reports indicate significant vear-on-vear growth in digital content monetization. with humour-based accounts among the highest-performing categories. As audiences seek authentic, entertaining content over traditional promotions, meme creators are wellpositioned to thrive. What was once a casual pastime has now become a structured, monetizable craft. Internet humour, in its many formats, has carved out a legitimate space in the creator economy, transforming laughter into livelihood and redefining the future of digital careers.

Osman Ali Khan, the last Nizam with Jawaharlal Nehru.

abelled 'one of the shortest, happiest

Union, the fault lines left behind, and what they signify.

In 1947, when the British left and India became Independent, the princely states had the choice/option to either join India or Pakistan or remain independent. Being one state not under the British rule, Hyderabad opposed the idea of a merger with India in 1947. Home Minister Sardar Patel requested Osman Ali Khan Asaf Jah VII, the last Nizam of the princely, to join India, but he refused. Instead, he declared Hyderabad as an independent nation (Azad Hyderabad) on August 15, 1947. Lord Mountbatten proposed the Heads of Agreement deal in June 1948, which gave Hyderabad the status of an autonomous dominion nation under India. India was ready to sign the deal and did so but the Nizam refused on the grounds that he wanted complete independence or the status of a dominion under the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Initially targeting zamindars and deshmukhs, the Communists soon launched a full-scale revolution against the Nizam. Beginning mid-1946, the Razakar-Communist battle became increasingly violent, with both sides using cruel tactics. Fear of a Communist state and accession, Hyderabad signed a ceasefire agreement with the dominion of India in November 1947, preserving all prior agreements save for the stationing of Indian soldiers in the state. Hyderabad broke the agreement in all areas: foreign affairs, defence, and communications, interfering with border and railway trade, and secretly lending Pakistan 15 million pounds The authorities of the new Dominion of India were fearful of India becoming Balkanized if Hyderabad remained independ ent. According to A G Noorani Indian Prime Minister Jawaharla Nehru was concerned with put ting an end to what he referred to Hvderabad's 'secessionist as effort,' but he preferred negotiations and viewed military action as the last choice. Home Minister Sardar Patel, on the other hand, took a firm position and had no tolerance for negotiations, ordering the seizure and annexation of Hyderabad. India invaded the state on September 13, 1948, fol-

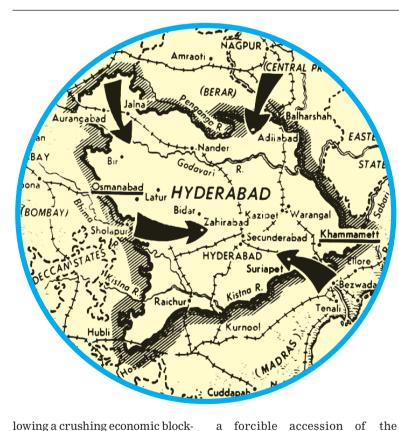

The Nizam also made unsuccessful attempts to seek intervention of the United Nations. Nizam by a cablegram, dated 21 August 1948, approached the United Nation's Security Council under Article 35 (2) 'that a grave dispute had arisen between Hyderabad and India, which unless settled in accordance with the international law and justice, was likely to endanger the maintenance of International peace and security and bound to create Communal war through Indian subcontinent.' Jose Arce, the Argentinean delegate to the U.N. Security Council, took strong objection at the Indian Government's act of Army action on Hyderabad State. He described that, "The March of the Indian troops on the Capital of Hyderabad reminds me of the March of Italian troops towards the Abyssinian Capital."

Operation Polo Story of Hyderabad

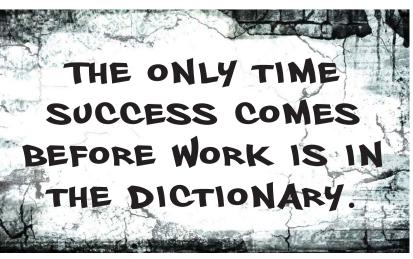

Sardar Patel, the Liberator of the State of Hyderabad, being welcomed by the Nizam of the Hyderabad.

#HISTORY

Jayanto Nath Chaudhuri (L) talking with Syed Ahmed El Edroos.

THE WALL

lowing a crushing economic blockade, fearful of the establishment of a Communist state in Hyderabad and the rise of violent Razakars. The Nizam then signed an instrument of accession, thereoy joining India. The secret arms collection of

Nizam from Pakistan, unabated atrocities of Razakars and the rising swav of the Communists over thousands of villages hastened the Union Government for Hyderabad State. In particular, the Government of India was alarmed at the fast growing strength of the Communist Party in Telangana region. In the summer of 1948, Indian officials, especially Patel, signaled an armed action against Hyderabad. Britain encouraged India to resolve the issue without the use of force, but refused Nizam's requests for help.

BABY BLUES

wars ever seen,' the integration of the princely state of Hyderabad in 1948 was anything but that. Read about the truth behind the creation of an Indian

TSC Global Awareness Day: Spreading Hope and Knowledge

SC Global Awareness Day, observed annually on May 15, aims to raise awareness about Tuberous Sclerosis Complex (TSC), a rare genetic disorder that causes non-cancerous tumours to grow in vital organs like the brain, heart, kidnevs, and skin. This dav is dedicated to educating the public, supporting affected families, and promoting early diagnosis and research. With no known cure. TSC impacts each person differently, making awareness and understanding critical. Global landmarks are lit in blue to honour those living with TSC and to inspire hope. Together, we can shine a light on TSC and push for progress.

Seeking UN intervention

The Nizam also made unsuccess ful attempts to seek intervention of the United Nations. Nizam by a cablegram, dated 21 August 1948, approached the United Nation's Security Council under Article 35 (2) 'that a grave dispute had arisen between Hyderabad and India, which unless settled in accordance with the international law and justice, was likely to endanger the maintenance of International peace and security and bound to create Communa war through Indian subcontinent.' Jose Arce, the Argentinean delegate to the U.N. Security Council, took strong objection at the Indian Government's act of Army action on Hyderabad State. He described that, "The March of the Indian troops on the Capital of Hyderabad reminds me of the March of Italian troops towards the Abyssinian Capital." The idea of Hvderabad arming itself aided by Pakistan did not go down well with the Indian Government. Sardar Patel described the idea of an independent Hyderabad as 'an ulcer in the heart of India which needed to be removed surgically." India decided to annex Hyderabad. This operation was named Operation Polo, and at times, it was also referred to as Operation Caterpillar. Though it was only a five-day war that began on September 13 and lasted till September 18, it was significant as the Indian Army took over a powerful state and Hyderabad was ceded to India.

Osman Ali Khan, the last Nizam with Jawaharlal Nehru.

Emergency declared A state of Emergency was declared when 36,000 Indian entered Hyderabad roops because the government was apprehensive about how the rest of India would react. It is estimated that 32 were killed and 97 injured on the Indian side and 490 killed and 122 wounded from Hyderabad. The Commander-in-Chief of Armed Forces, General Roy Boucher opposed the military action against Hyderabad due to preoccupation of army in Kashmir. However, the troops were commanded by Major General J N Choudhary. It was a two pronged attack, the main force moving along the Sholapur-Hyderabad road covering a distance of 186 miles, while another division commanded by Major General Rudra marched along the Vijavawada-Hyderabad Road. On 9th of September 1948, the Nehru's government took the decision to resort to Police Action to remove 'the cancer of Hyderabad in the belly of India.' The Indian Army under the overall supervision of Lt. General

Rajendra Singh, General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Southern Command entered into Hyderabad on the morning of 13th September, 1948. Though they gave a little resistance during the first two days, the Razakars and Nizam's forces fled from the field. On 17th September, 1948, the Nizam's forces, under the command of Syed Ahmed El-Edroos, surrendered to the government of India. The Nizam accepted his defeat and Hyderabad became a part of ndian Union

After the Police Action, the Nizam informed the UN Secretary-General by cablegram, dated 22 September 1948, that he had withdrawn the complaint and that the delegation to the Security Council, which had been sent at the instance of his former government, had ceased to have any authority to represent him or his State. With the surrender of Nizam and Hyderabad state, the last and the biggest princely State of India had become an integral part of the Indian Union.

> 111 rajeshsharma1049@gmail.com

From Independence to Integration, Sardar Patel's Role In Unifying Hyderabad.

By Rick Kirkman & Jerry Scott

#LIFESTYLE

Wake Up, Naturally!

Ditch the Coffee, 7 Simple Habits to Boost Your Morning Energy the Natural Way!

et's be honest, mornings can be rough. The alarm rings, you hit snooze (once, maybe twice), and then drag yourself out of bed with a groggy brain and a to-do list that's already overwhelming. For many, the first instinct is to reach for a steaming cup of coffee. But what i you could energize your morning without relying on caffeine? Whether you're cutting back on coffee, trying to beat the crash, or just curious about natural energy boosts, here are 7 tried-and-true ways to supercharge your morn ings, no coffee required.

 \boldsymbol{Y} our body is slightly dehydrated when you wake up, and that sluggish feeling could be due to a lack of water not a lack of caffeine. Drinking a glass of water first thing in the morning helps jump-

2. Let the Light In you'll feel more alert and moti-What to Do: Open the curtains as soon as you wake up. If it's still dark outside, consider your water for an extra kick of electrolytes.

using a daylight-simulating

6. Try Deep Breathing

7. Set a Positive Intention

Examples:

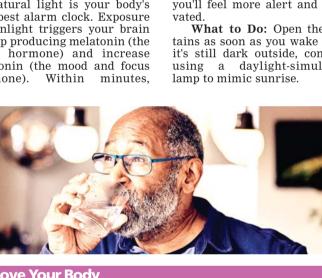

can't always deliver.

Bonus: The Power of Routine The real magic happens when you turn these habits into a consisten routine. When your body knows what to expect, it begins to work with you, not against you, in the morning. Experiment with these strategies and find the mix that works best for your lifestyle.

ZITS

3. Move Your Body

L' thing you feel like doing in the morning, but even five minutes of movement can work wonders. Stretching, yoga, or a brisk walk can boost blood circulation,

N othing wakes up your nerv-IN ous system like a contrast shower, alternating between hot and cold water. The cold water stimulates circulation, increases alertness, and gives your body a jolt of natural energy, while the

4. Take a Contrast Shower warm water soothes muscles and promotes relaxation How to Do It: Start with warm water for a minute. switch to cold for 30 seconds, and repeat

T xercise might be the last release endorphins, and shake off that morning grogginess Quick Fix: Try a short 'wakeup workout' routine, 10 jumping jacks, 10 squats, 10 arm circles, and a 30-second plank.

this cycle 2-3 times. End with cold water for a lasting energy boost.

start your metabolism, flush out toxins, and rehydrate your cells. Pro Tip: Add a slice of lemon or a pinch of sea salt to

W hat you eat (or don't eat) in the morning plays a huge role in your energy levels. Skip the sugaraden cereals and pastries, opt for a breakfast that balances protein, nealthy fats, and complex carbs. Top Choices:

• Greek yogurt with berries and

• Whole grain toast with avocado • A smoothie with spinach, banana, almond butter, and plant-based milk These foods provide steady energy without the crash that often follows a sugary or carb-heavy breakfast.

or Meditation

might sound counterintuitive but slowing down your breath can actually wake up your mind. Deep breathing sends oxygen to your brain and calms your nervous system, helping you feel more centered and clear-headed Quick Try: Use the 4-7-8 method, inhale for 4 seconds, hold for 7, and exhale slowly for 8. Repeat this 3-4 times. Meditation apps like Headspace or Insight Timer offer short, energizing morning sessions that can ground you before the day begins.

ometimes, all you need to ener Solution gize your day is the right mindset. Take a few moments each morning to set a simple, positive intention, something that gives your day direction and meaning.

• "Today, I will focus on progress, not perfection "I will bring calm to my chaos."

• "I will choose kindness, especially towards myself." This gentle mental nudge sets the tone and gives you a sense of control, something that even caffeine

By Jerry Scott & Jim Borgman